Position Title: Director of Clinical Education, an open rank non-tenure track faculty position, Department of Physical Therapy & Rehabilitation Sciences, Drexel University

The Department of Physical Therapy & Rehabilitation Sciences (PTRS) at Drexel University seeks a dynamic leader to serve as Director of Clinical Education for its Doctor of Physical Therapy (DPT) program. The Director of Clinical Education (DCE) is a core non-tenure track faculty member who leads the DPT clinical education enterprise with help and support from an assistant director of clinical education, a full-time staff member dedicated primarily to clinical education, the DPT Program Director, and Department Chair. Serving as DCE will be the primary responsibility of the successful candidate and account for about half of her/his workload. Remaining effort will be divided across teaching, scholarship, and service. Opportunities for clinical practice exist if desired.

Essential Qualifications:

Significant clinical education experience giving the candidate an excellent understanding of the responsibilities, requirements, and challenges of DPT clinical education

Strong communication skills

Evidence of leadership, teamwork, and innovative thinking

Commitment to an evidence-based approach to clinical education

Alignment with the mission and direction of the PTRS Department

Pennsylvania physical therapy licensure or eligibility

Desired Characteristics:

Post-professional degree (i.e., PhD, EdD, DHS, DSc, ScD)

Experience as a DCE, Assistant DCE, or Site/Center Coordinator of Clinical Education

Experience building and supporting academic-clinical partnerships

Well-versed with trends and discussions taking place nationally related to DPT clinical education and its evolution

About the Department of Physical Therapy & Rehabilitation Sciences:

The mission of the Department of Physical Therapy & Rehabilitation Sciences is to advance the profession of physical therapy and rehabilitation sciences by providing exemplary education, research, service, and clinical practice. The Department has 15 core faculty including the DCE. We also have three active emeritus faculty, more than 50 adjunct faculty, instructors, and lab assistants,

Description:

and a well-established cadre of strong clinical instructors at sites across the United States. In addition to the DPT, we offer a PhD program in Health and Rehabilitation Sciences, a DHS program in Rehabilitation Sciences, residency programs in Orthopaedic Physical Therapy and Pediatric Physical Therapy, and operate a faculty practice with three clinics. We are located in the College of Nursing & Health Professions on Drexel University's Center City Campus in Philadelphia. DPT student performance metrics including graduation rate, licensure pass rate, licensure exam score statistics, and clinical education performance are outstanding.
